BACCALAUREATE DISCOURSE.

By President M. C. Fernald, Maine State College, June 25, 1882.

Gen. 13, 12.—Abram dwelt in the land of Canaan and Lot dwelt in the cities of the plain, and pitched his tent toward Sodom.

In the chapter from which these words are taken, we have a representation of oriental life, which furnishes striking contrasts in its two leading characters.

Abram was rich in cattle, in silver and in gold, and Lot also possessed flocks and herds and tents. Together they had journeyed into Egypt, to sojourn while the famine in their own land was grievous, and together had returned to the place where Abram's tent had been at the beginning, between Bethel and Hai; to the place where Abram had established an alter and called on the name of the Lord.

So great was their substance that the land was not able to bear them that they might dwell together. A strife arose between Abram's herdmen and Lot's herdmen,—it may have been over a bit of pasturage or over a well at which they watered their flocks, each herdman striving to establish priority of claim for his own master.

In the magnanimity shown by Abram towards his nephew, over whom it would have seemed fitting to claim pre-eminence, observe the spirit of the sermon on the mount, nineteen centuries ere from the Savior's lips the remarkable words of that sermon fell on the ears of the gathered disciples.

"And Abram said unto Lot, let there be no strife, I pray thee, between me and thee, and between my herdmen and thy herdmen; for we be brethren.

Is not the whole land before thee? separate thyself, I pray thee, from me; if thou wilt take the left hand, then I will go to the right; or if thou depart to the right hand, then I will go to the left."

The narrative continues; "And Lot lifted up his eyes and beheld all the plain of Jordan that it was well watered everywhere, before the Lord destroyed Sodom and Gomorrah, even as the garden of the Lord, like the land of Egypt as thou comest unto Zoar.

Then Lot chose him all the plain of Jordan; and Lot journeyed East; and they separated themselves, the one from the other.

Abram dwelt in the land of Canaan and Lot dwelt in the cities of the plain, and pitched his tent toward Sodom."

In contrast with Abram's generosity, mark the utter selfishness manifested by Lot. If we regard the land alone, the selection was admirable. It was the best part of the whole country, especially for one whose principal wealth consisted in flocks and herds. Its pasturage was excellent; it was well watered, and was "as the garden of the Lord." Considering, therefore, simply the territory selected, the choice could not have been better; but this very fact was Lot's condemnation.

One would have supposed that touched by his uncle's magnanimity, he would have declined to make the first choice, and expressed a willingness to accept that part of the land which Abram, as the head of the family, and as the chosen of God, should be pleased to assign him.

Of so set so unselfish, Lot was not capable. Like thousands of his descendants, he clutched at the opportunity to gain the fairest portion for himself. He was, moreover, careful in his choice, for he "lifted up his eyes" and deliberately surveyed the surrounding country. To his vision, two natural divisions were presented; the one, the hill country, subject to famine, barren, uninviting; the other, the fertile plain of the Jordan, luxuriant in rich herbage for flocks and herds. By an east and west line, he could have divided the country so that each might have had a fair share of the pasturage afforded by the river valley, but, taking advantage of Abram's fraternal proposal,—selfishness could hardly go farther,—he chose him all the plain of the Jordan and pitched his tent toward the idolatrous and iniquitous city.

This was the supreme moment in Lot's career,—the crisis in his history. He chose selfishly, wickedly, and all his subsequent misfortunes were but the mature fruitage of this unholy choice.

So the crises involving choice which inevitably occur in the life of every individual, and in the history of every nation, are turning points in destiny, and may ally in one's favor all the forces of the universe, or may array them unalterably against him.

A fuller development of this thought furnishes a theme worthy of our most careful and considerate attention. It finds significant illustration in the lives of the two characters under notice.

It is to be observed that, at first, Lot simply pitched his tent towards Sodom. He did not propose to become a dweller in the wicked city. He has turned his back on Paganism; will he return to worship again her idols? He would doubtless have scoffed at the idea. He was only in the outer circle of the maelstrom that was destined to draw him into its vortex.

It is no apology for Lot to say that he knew not of the wickedness of the people of Sodom. Had he listened to the voice of conscience, GOD'S voice, he would have based his selection not on any apparent temporary advantage, and his feet would not have strayed within the precincts of that city whose iniquities were inviting swift and sure destruction.

He did not, however, allow for the continuing power of an evil choice. He may not have understood that, with certainty and almost from necessity, every wicked choice carries in its bosom a train of direful consequences. Men are wont to shut their eyes to the fact that all the sad and terribly fatal results of sin are involved in the first lapses from virtue.

As a moth circles around a flame, dazzled by its resplendency, to its own destruction, so Lot, as the days and weeks went by, constantly pitched his tent nearer and nearer the ill-fated city. At length, we find him within its walls, sitting in that most prominent of all places, within the gates, doubtless not wholly reconciled to his companionships,—for we read that his soul was daily vexed with the filthy conversation of the wicked and with their unlawful deeds;—yet within the city, and subjected to all the degrading influences of its abominations.

What countless hosts of human moths does Lot represent! No young man is substituting selfishness for the generous impulses which God has given him, is beginning to take bribes of dishonesty, to tamper with the wine-cup, to cleave to any form of vice or adopt any course of conduct which touches injuriously the foundations of his moral nature, who is not making the fatal mistake which Lot made, in pitching his tent toward Sodom, and sooner or later, unless God save, will find himself involved in ruin as terrible and irretrievable as that of the doomed city.

Too late Lot discovered his fearful mistake, when, on the invasion of Sodom, he was compelled to suffer with its inhabitants, and finally, when stripped of all his possessions, he barely escaped with his life from the on-coming destruction.

In the end, the selfishness that promised fruits sweet to the taste, furnished only those which were charged with bitterness. The choice that gave promise of prosperity and security, at the last brought only adversity and ruin. "He that soweth the wind shall reap the whirl-wind." "He that soweth to the flesh shall of the flesh reap corruption."

Let us not lose sight of him who is really the principle character in this remarkable drama.

We may well imagine that Abram was left saddened by the departure of Lot and especially by the exhibition of his heartless and insatiable greed.

It did not accord with his kindly and noble nature to witness the ungenerous course of his nephew without sharp pangs of sorrow.

It was a crisis, therefore, in Abram's life, and in it we find him hearing himself manfully and more than manfully, since he who but recently had been led out of heathen surroundings, already manifested some of the ripened graces of Christianity.

Lot was gone, but the God unto whom Abram had erected an altar was with his servant with tokens of approval. Chief among these tokens was that marvellous promise which nearly two scores of centuries have only partially fulfilled and whose complete fulfilment shall involve all centuries to come.

"And the Lord said unto Abram, after that Lot was separated from him, Lift up now thine eyes, and look from the place where thou are northward and southward and eastward and westward.

For all the land which thou seest, to thee will I give it, and to thy seed forever.

And I will make thy seed as the dust of the earth, so that if a man can number the dust of the earth, then shall thy seed also be numbered.

Arise, walk through the land in the length of it and in the breadth of it; for I will give it unto thee."

Thus was it revealed to Abram that he had lost nothing by his generosity.

"They that seek the Lord shall not want any good thing." The territory promised, though not large, included "all the plain of the Jordan." It was to belong to Abram and his descendants forever—valuable not so much for the extent of country embraced, as for the uses to which it was to be devoted. It was to be the land of the altar, a land dedicated to the worship of God, a candle-stick in which was to be set the light which should dispel the darkness from all nations, and illumine the world.

The second part of the promise was subsequently renewed to Abram, when the word of the Lord came to him, saying, "Look now toward heaven and tell the stars, if thou be able to number them; so shall thy seed be."

This portion of the promise is receiving fulfilment in larger and larger measure as the years go by; not only in the increasing and almost countless multitudes who are direct lineal descendants of Abram, but in the wider and more important sense which assures us in the words of Paul to the Galatians, that, "There is neither Jew nor Greek, there is neither bond nor free, there is neither male nor female; for ye are all one in Christ Jesus.

And if ye be Christs', then are ye Abram's seed, and heirs according to the promise."

The contrasts which have been presented in this hasty glimpse at portions of the life of Abram and of Lot are sharply defined and instructive.

The one failed at the critical moment, placing considerations of self above all others. This first fatal error involved all the errors that followed. It contained the germ of a harvest of misfortunes and of wretchedness.

The other failed not when the crucial test came, but, heeding the monitions of conscience, obedient to the Divine voice, dwelt in sustaining communion with the Almighty, blessed of Him with prosperity and peace, the father of the faithful, the favored of God!

Both reaped as they had sown. Verily, "they that sow iniquity shall reap vanity; they that sow to the flesh shall of the flesh reap corruption, but they that sow to the Spirit shall by the Spirit, reap life everlasting."

Not less significant are the crises which not unfrequently occur in the history of states and nations. A careful examination will reveal the fact that all their subsequent history is dependent on the manner in which these crises are passed.

There was a time during the war of the rebellion, when, had Abraham Lincoln been less than divinely guided, he might have failed at the supreme moment. When, however, that moment came, he was prepared for it. He affixed his name to that proclamation which shattered the fetters on the limbs of four millions of slaves, and by the same blow shattered the hopes of the Confederacy. By that act he gave success to the forces contending for national supremacy. Had Abraham Lincoln failed in this crisis, who can tell how much longer the horrors of war might have continued, and with what other result the contest might have ended? It was a turning point in the history of our national existence, and well was it for us that our leader's chief reliance was in the strength of the everlasting arm and his trust in the nation's God.

By way of further illustration, let us go back a hundred years and more in our country's history, and consider, for a moment, how vast the interests that were hinged on a successful transition from the colonial condition to that of an independent nation. The event was one "big with the fate of empire," when the signers of the Declaration of Independence, pledging to one another their lives, their fortunes and their sacred honor, appended their names to that immortal charter of our liberties.

Had they faltered in that hour, who can say how much more lasting would have been the injustice and oppression from which the colonies suffered, and how much more costly in treasure and in blood, would have been the establishment on this continent of the principles of liberty? All honor to their immortal spirits! Grandly, heroically, they met the unprecedented and important issues involved in this birth-time of the Republic, appealing to the Supreme Judge of the world for the rectitude of their intentions, and in firm reliance on the protection of Divine Providence. In them God has verified His word, "Them that honor me, I will honor."

In the solicitude and suspense which pervaded this nation one year ago, when a beloved and revered President was stricken down, God was speaking to its people. The event in one sense was not a National crisis. In Mexico, or in the States of South America, such an event under such circumstances would have brought about a real crisis in national affairs; but so firmly established are the foundations of our government and its institutions, so intrenched in the hearts of the people, that, even if other high officers of State had also been involved in the assassin's assault, the affairs of the government would have gone on much as before, the administration of justice would not have been seriously impeded, and all popular rights would still have been maintained. It was a crisis less, and yet more, than national. It was international, essentially a crisis in human affairs, an event appealing to all hearts throughout Christendom, and touching the chords of a world-wide sympathy. How unavailing the skill of man, how impotent the power of earthly monarchs in the presence and under the mysterious touch of the Sovereign of the Universe!

The facts of our own history, with modifications, have had their counterpart at the inception and in the progress of events of all the other nations.

France has passed through repeated crises in emerging from which she has shattered thrones and made toys of emperors. Often she has made the mistake which Lot made in pitching his tent toward Sodom.

It is matter for thanksgiving that from her last fiery trial, she rises among the nations in a measure purified, and, with fairer auspices, under the banner of republicanism, starts anew in the race for continental supremacy.

England, upon whose dominions the sun in all his circuit does not go down, mistress of the seas, comes up from the conflict of centuries into the spirit of a larger liberty, and under the gentle sway of her peerless and Christian queen, holds fast to a vigorous and abounding national life.

In the distant East the morning star appears. Not in the history of the world is there another instance of a people rising from semi-civilization tending toward barbarism, to self-government, so rapidly as in Japan. She is the marvel of the age and of nations.

In China, the critical period has not yet been passed, but the crisis is coming. China, with her two thousand colleges, with libraries outnumbering ten to one our own, with a population of 400,000,000 among whom there are scarcely any who cannot read and write, cannot long continue to slumber. The night of ages is ending; already appear indications of renewed life. Let not the other nations hold her too cheaply, or deal with her too defiantly. "Once she burst the bonds of nationality and swept clean across the plains; nor was she stayed till she touched with her feet the waters of the Mediterranean." As she comes forth from the seclusion of centuries in which she has wrapped herself as in a mantle, she is destined to manifest a power which hitherto has been little suspected.

In the providence of God, our western coast is so placed as to command this nation, as well as the other nations of the orient, with reciprocal relations. In what manner shall we conduct ourselves in the approaching crisis? Shall we so deal with China as to insure and foster a Christian civilization in the midst of her people, or shall we show that we can furnish nothing better for her than the worship of her own idols?

The nations of the earth are moving, advancing, retrograding, some with erected altars worshipping Abram's God in security, abundance and peace; others, alas! pitching their tents toward Sodom, inviting their own destruction.

"Righteousness exalteth a nation; but sin is a reproach to any people." The Lord hath declared that the nation and kingdom that will not serve Him shall perish, yea, those nations shall be utterly wasted.

Connected with the general thought we have been endeavoring to enforce, that the manner in which crises are passed is determinative of destiny, both with individuals and with nations, is another thought, suggested by the former, but not less important for us to consider; namely, the continuity of influence, especially when of beneficent character, as shown chiefly in the perpetuated influence of good men, and of the institutions which they establish.

Goodness perpetuates itself. Wickedness perpetuates itself for a time, but carries with it the elements of its own decay. "The labor of the righteous tendeth to life, the fruit of the wicked, to sin." "The memory of the just is blessed, but the name of the wicked shall rot."

Notwithstanding the wisdom of Solomon thus gives assurance of the final result, there is a persistency in the forces of evil which it is folly to disregard.

Of this latter fact, sufficient illustrations have already been cited. We may, therefore, limit our study to the main proposition, the continuity of influence when of beneficent character.

The perpetuated influence of good men arises from the nature of their works, which, although they cease from their labors, still do follow them.

Near the close of the seventeenth century, a few ministers came together, made a contribution of books, and thus laid the basis of Yale College. For a century and a half, they have slumbered in the dust, but their influence has survived and has been constantly multiplying itself through the work performed, the power produced and the culture disseminated by that institution.

A half century earlier, a few public-spirited men in eastern Massachusetts decided that, although it was a time of poverty, it was possible for them to live without money, but not without the means of liberal learning, and founded Harvard College. Will the works of these men ever cease? Such institutions are for all time.

Their halls may moulder and crumble, but others will be reared in their places. The continuity of life in them can only cease when all things earthly die.

Who can name the founders of Cambridge and Oxford in England? Five hundred years have rolled away since these illustrious seats of learning were established. The names of the men who contributed to found them may have passed into oblivion, but the foundations remain, and have withstood the shocks of centuries, and all the civilized world recognizes with admiration, the perpetuated power of those men who consecrated their wealth to objects of so worthy character.

Twelve years ago, George Peabody died, but thousands of English working men occupying tenement houses in London built by his munificence, bless his memory today. The benefactions of the "Peabody Educational Fund" to the South are contributing to elevate to true manhood and womanhood, the children of a long-oppressed race.

It is the great beauty and utility of such benefactions, that they cannot cease. They are perennial, and minister to human needs so long as human needs exist. The men who make them die, but their influence survives and through all time must abide.

This continuing power of a good influence is not limited strictly to ministrations of benevolence.

It obtains in art, in literature, and in every form of ministration by which high and worthy inspirations are awakened in the minds of men.

Raphael and Michael Angelo, long since dead, still live in the lofty inspirations which their works have enkindled in the minds of other artists, and thus will they continue to live through the coming generations.

Not all the names of the builders of European cathedrals in the middle ages have been preserved, but the cathedrals stand; and of the architectural skill and power of the builders, they are continuing monuments, which, though silent and mute, like the everlasting hills, declare the glory of God.

It is two hundred and sixty-five years since the bard who has made Stratford-on-Avon a household word, laid aside his pen and peacefully sank to rest. Who can estimate the wealth of joyful inspiration which has been created by Shakespeare, fitly described by an eminent preacher and scholar, as "the universal pilgrim whom everybody counts as his fellow; who walks with kings, with princes, with philosophers, with statesmen, with artists, with beggars, with paupers, whose fellowship is with his whole kind, who hath thrown the light of his genius over every station of life, bringing to it something of brightness, much of interpretation, and not a little of joy, and whose name stands forever?"

What a treasury of the lofty and sublime in poetic diction has been given to the world in "Paradise Lost!"

So long as the English language is read and spoken, so long will the strains of Milton exalt humanity and purify life. What inexpressible sweetness in the hymn "Nearer, my God, to Thee," and how much of comfort and consolation has that grand old hymn "Rock of Ages" brought to unnumbered Christian hearts! The writing of one such winged hymn is enough to perpetuate the name of any man and render it immortal.

The thought can hardly have failed to present itself that the perpetuity of influence and of power has its best illustration and full consummation in the life of Him, who was at once the son of man, and the son of God.

Thirty-three years marked the full period from Bethlehem to Calvary, and yet the renovating power of that life has been the one transforming agency in the world's life for eighteen centuries.

Many men there are whose lives are like the meteor "that sweeps through the sky and strikes the heaven with a moment's glow and then leaves the darkness greater than when it appeared." The life of Christ is like the morning sun shining with steady effulgence and visiting all realms with light and heat, with quickening and vivifying power. The beneficence and power of Christ's life, commencing with his ministrations in the province of Galilee, have widened and deepened with the advancing years. They are the inspiring force of every true civilization; they carry in themselves for all the ages, the world's best hopes. The life which partakes of His spirit and is modelled after the pattern He has set, cannot be meaningless and valueless. It is conformed to the highest standards. Its purposes cannot be devious, and upon it the winds of heaven blow not adversely.

To it for strength and support are drawn the forces of the earth beneath, and the heavens above.

It is a matter of the highest moment, whether or not to one's self are thus allied the powers that be.

The character of the government to which one owes and renders allegiance may thus be to him of the largest consequence.

In 1869, a man arrested in Cuba under suspicious circumstances, was condemned to be shot by the Spanish authorities of that island. He was an Englishman by birth, and an American by naturalization. Both the English and American consuls interposed to save his life, but the Spanish authorities were inexorable, and he was led forth for execution. At this critical moment, the English consul threw around the doomed man the British flag, and the American consul wrapped him in the folds of the stars and stripes, and dared the Spanish officials to fire upon these national emblems. This they deemed too hazardous to be done. The man was saved by the power represented by the national ensigns which enfolded him. So he that is wrapped about with the robe of Christ's righteousness, has a pledge of eternal security. If it be of value to be a citizen of a strong earthly kingdom, how transcendently more important to be an heir to citizenship in the heavenly kingdom!

"Thy kingdom, O God, is an everlasting kingdom, and thy dominion endureth throughout all generations."

Members of the Senior Class:

As you approach the close of your college life, and age about to go forth into the larger life of the world, I cannot repress the thought that some of the considerations which have been presented, have for you a special significance.

You have arrived at a period when everything in your future history is dependent upon decisions which you must now make. In the providence of God you will be called to pass through few more important crises than that which is immediately before you, the character of the issue of which you may be even now determining. Various paths are open to you, which are you to follow? In your choice will you imitate Lot and be guided by principles of selfishness and pitch your tents toward Sodom? or will you rather imitate the righteous Abram, subordinate self, and place first, right, duty, God?

In the development of our theme, illustrations have been furnished of events which served as turning points or crises in the career of individuals and in the history of nations. Towering infinitely above all these and immeasurably farther-reaching in its results, is that event which constitutes the great crisis in human history, and out of which spring all the glad hopes of humanity. "For God so loved the world that He gave His only begotten Son, that whosoever believeth in Him should not perish but have everlasting life."

The gift of the Son of God was an event which has reference to you and to me. As all other events in the world's history pale into insignificance in comparison with this, so all other choices are of secondary consequence in comparison with that choice which makes Christ's spirit the central and controlling force in individual lives. It is the choice that gives perpetuity of influence and of power. It is the force that allies in one's favor, all the beneficent forces of the Universe of God. Does a young man desire success? This is the way. Does he desire the largest development of his intellectual powers? This is the way. Does he desire a life of the truest service and of the highest usefulness to his fellow-men? This is the way. "Seek ye first the kingdom of God and His righteousness, and all these things shall be added unto you."

The kingdoms of this world pass away, thrones crumble and they who have sat upon them pass into forgetfulness, but he who, through helpfulness to his fellowmen, renders service to God, shall be held in everlasting remembrance.

My dear young friends, my heart goes out to you in congratulations when I reflect upon the opportunities and possibilities which are before you.

You may well account it good fortune that you enter upon life's activities in the closing part of the nineteenth century. For your own sakes, for the sake of the institution which sends you forth with her blessing, for every consideration of manliness and of loyalty to right and to truth, prove yourselves worthy of the age and the advantages which are yours.

"Life is a sheet of paper white,
Whereon each one of us may write
His line or two, and then comes night;
If but a line, be it sublime,
Not failure, but low aims, is crime."

God help you to be true men, earnest and loyal; and to live lives radiant with Christ's love, lives that shall "shine as the brightness of the firmament, and as the stars forever and ever."

PLAISTED AND THE DEMOCRATIC PARTY

[Lewiston Journal]

Gov Plaisted's 'machine' is a parody on popular representation The Democratic party in Maine never had a boss so implicitly obeyed The Governor has ordered his Congressional ticket and settled it though not without some tall swearing in Bangor and Gardiner, and he is now understood to be silencing a few Democrats who threaten to be kickers in next Tuesday's Democratic State Convention in Lewiston How well he is succeeding, the hubbub on the back seats in City Hall next Tuesday, will show Every effort is being made to pack the Convention with unquestioning Fusionists We hear that a few hardmoney Democrats have been quietly at work for several weeks, declaring that if the Democrats put themselves on Plaisted's platform, they are whipped from the word 'Go

The prospect is that there will be a big crowd of the kid gloved gentlemen in attendance talking, patronizingly to the back lots It is said however there will be in opportune rehearsals of the dear Sam letter which has been committed to memory by several hard money Democrats, with numerous alphurous phrases between the lines Special trains will fetch the Plaisted forces from Bangor and the east on the morning of the Convention, with the view of dragooning the hard money men of the party into silence—a feat which smaller and less energetic numbers, doubtless could easily perform

The prospect is that the most interesting part of the convention will be held in the private rooms at the DeWitt, Monday night and Tuesday morning It is the avowed determination of the machine to make the Convention to run smoothly, and to that end to insert all the gags needful before the call to order

[Portland Press]

BOSS PLAISTED

Ladd and Murch assistant Democrats, have been renominated for Congress in obedience to the orders of Governor Plaisted Their renomination was not desired by the men who elected them two years ago A stubborn fight was made in Convention against Mr. Ladd, and in Mr Murch's district, many towns did not even care to choose delegates They prefer to do their work at the polls The opposition to these Congressmen comes from Greenbackers who favor fusion, are willing to make a fair divy with the Democrats, but don't wish to vote for a delegation that to all intents and purposes solidly Democratic But they have been bullied and coaxed out of their choice Governor Plaisted who has made with the Democracy a bargain upon the success of which his political future depends is naturally anxious to carry out that bargain In return for the Lewiston nomination he must induce his Greenback followers to support four Democratic candidates for Representatives in the next National House So he puts the screws upon the Congressional Conventions and by threats and trickery succeeds in his design The Greenbackers are rather restive under this system of bossism but the Democrats, who have always liked bosses and were governed by them for years are glad to feel their necks under a strong yoke again

The statistics relative to our export of manufactured cotton show an unexpected gain compared with previous years For 1881 it was 8 times in value our exports of cotton in 1872 and three times the value of exports in 1860 We sent abroad last year (6 581 493 yards of colored cotton against 37 375 166 for 1880 and 80 399 154 yards of uncolored cotton against 88 821, 000 for 1860 Of other cotton manufactures we sent away last year 1,963 701 yards for 1,130 117 the year before The value of cotton exports in 1881 was $13 187 for $9 981 418 for 1880 While this is an improvement it is still not a flattering showing as the value of our annual product of cotton fabrics is about $400 000 000 Our total exports of raw cotton for 1881 were $2 190 928 772 Our total production was 3 199 822 082 pounds To this we added, by importation of Egyptian cotton for manufacture into a special quality of thread, 4 449 866 pounds

The BANGOR WHIG is trying to rob Representative Ladd of all credit for his efficient support of the Geneva Award bill —Saco Age

That would be like robbing the New Age of credit for truth and candor—robbing it of what it never possessed —Bath Times

A revolt is said to be spreading among the Indiana Democrats against the attempt of William H English to run the party in that State He is trying to boss not only the make up of the State ticket, but the construction of the platform also This interference has caused much bitter feeling and may result in a fierce contest in the State Convention The leaders of the party are reported to feel less sanguine now of carrying the State than they did three months ago

The California Democratic Convention adopted a platform beginning "We reaffirm our fidelity to the principles of Democracy" Fidelity is too fine a virtue to be wantonly wasted, and the Democracy has been notoriously out of principles for some years —Tribune

Slightly mixed was the despatch sent to the Mayor of Cincinnati on the night of the November election in 1860, by the late William Dennison, then Governor of Ohio. The Neil House, Columbus, was on fire, and the place was poorly supplied with fire engines, and this was the way in which the Governor asked for help and told the news at the same time: "The Neil House is on fire Lincoln has carried Ohio by 50,000 majority Send two fire-engines to put it out"

The Virginia Bourbons are holding out inducements to the Republicans to desert the Readjusters and form a coalition with them. It is doubtful if they succeed in influencing any number outside of the few dissatisfied Republicans who refused to go with Mahone last year.

PERSONAL AND MISCELLANEOUS.

It is now said that Capt. Howgate is living in St. Louis, disguised.

Colonel Robert G Ingersoll and family will spend the summer at Long Beach, L I.

Judge Cox, who presided over the trial of Guiteau, will spend the summer at Narragansett Pier

Of the graduating class of Cornell University this year, thirty one are Republicans, eleven Independents, and four Democrats

Henry Irving, the actor, and E R Russell, the editor of the Liverpool Daily Post, will together, make a flying visit to this country in the fall

The Rev C H A Bulkley of Port Henry, N Y, has lately been appointed to the chair of logic, rhetoric history and literature in Howard University in Washington

Representative Calkins, of Indiana, is to deliver the address at the commencement exercises of the Virginia Agricultural and Mechanical College at Blacksburg, Va, on July 10th

The Mun prize and class medal for attainments in Sanskrit in the University of Edinburgh has this year been awarded to William J Seelye, a recent graduate of Amherst College

The Rev Horace Bushnell and wife, of Cincinnati celebrated their golden wedding last Monday He is still the pastor of the congregation to which he began to minister more than a half a century ago, although for the past twenty five years he has been totally blind

The Ohio Democracy is evidently puzzled as to what course to pursue its convention The Republicans left in the party no good issue upon which to go into the campaign The hope it had after the spring elections of carrying the State has vanished and the unpromising outlook is causing a strong reaction The leaders apparently recognize the difficulties of the situation and are moving slowly and carefully The construction of a platform for the State Convention to adopt is said to be the principal cause for worry

Greenbackism does not appear to be very rampant in Eastern Maine this season In the convention at Rockland to nominate a candidate for Congress only 28 towns of the 100 towns and plantations in the district were represented, and Mr. Murch carried off the nomination which Mr Rust had set his heart on. Mr Murch had the convention called in his own city Mr Rust can console himself that he has been saved from defeat at the polls by the eager friends of Mr Murch.—Boston Journal to many inquiries, both verbal and by letter, Dr Babcock desires to state that the ARTIFICIAL TEETH which he is making for $5.00 per set, are of the VERY BEST material in every respect, and are so guaranteed The teeth, the base, the finish, and in fact everything about them COULD NOT POSSIBLY be made superior, though the price were three times as large This is in reply to such inquirers as supposed that Dr B did not design to furnish the best at so low a price as $5.00 Extracting filling, treating aching teeth, treatment of mouth diseases and all other dental operations at very moderate prices.

Commencement Exercises

WATERVILLE June 25 Rev Alvah Hovey D D of the Newton Theological Seminary inaugurated Commencement Week by delivering the Baccalaureate sermon at the Baptist church, at two o'clock p m Theme "How unsearchable are the judgments and His ways are past finding out"

The week devoted to Ivy day exercises, Class Day, to the Junior prize declamation by Rev Thomas Armitage, pastor of the Fifth Avenue Baptist church New York City, delivered a very able and interesting sermon before the Maine Missionary Society this evening, his text being taken from Acts Chapter 10, verse 6

FORTY SEVENTH CONGRESS -First Session

Senate

WASHINGTON June 24 On motion of Mr Morrill of Vermont a bill was passed to fix the payment of pensions to which shall be made to their attorneys including the Commission of which shall deem it proper to allow

Mr Hoar for the Committee on Forfeited Lands reported a joint resolution authorizing the Secretary of the Interior to cause an examination to be made of the lands granted to aid in the construction of the Portland and Ogdensburg railroad and to report to Congress at its next session with a view to the ultimate adoption of a common line

The bill was then passed—23 to 18—to order to a third reading

Mr Kellogg of New York, chairman of the Committee on Appropriations reported back the bill appropriating $60 000 to pay for the deficiency in the appropriation for witnesses in United States courts

Mr Cameron of Pennsylvania, chairman of the Committee on Ways and Means, reported a concurrent resolution for the final adjournment of Congress at 12 o clock noon on the 1st July, adopted

The Senate went into Committee of the Whole (Mr Camp of New York in the chair) on the bill to reduce the internal revenue The first section having been read Mr Robeson, of New Jersey moved to amend by striking out the clause repealing the tax on bank

Mr Hoxman of Indiana moved to amend by striking from all that relates to banks of taxation Mr Kelley, of Pennsylvania opposed the amendments saying that the taxation of the capital of the National Banks was invidious

Mr Townsend of Illinois, defended the actions of the Republicans for the present measure which passing by a majority forced the burdens of taxation upon those best able to bear them Mr Robeson advocated his amendment which would leave a tax on capital of a banker but take it off his deposits

Mr Carlisle of Kentucky, asserted that the adoption of Mr Robeson's amendment would discriminate in favor of National banks and against State and private banks

Mr South of Illinois offered an amendment to the amendment, repealing the entire tax on capital of state and private banks and leaving it upon the capital of national banks Mr Page of California advocated Mr Robinson's amendment Mr Conkling moved and that it was not the sentiment on the part of Congress in giving away the treasure of the country which there existed a large surplus Mr Haskell of Kansas defended the bill as reducing taxation in the way in which it could be reduced, un-Tariff Commissioner had submitted a report

The question recurring upon Mr Robeson's amendment which was so modified as to apply to bank checks, drafts, orders &c, but simply to strike out the clause repealing the tax on bank capital deposits it was lost, yeas 35 nays 36

Mr Randall, of Pennsylvania, offered an amendment providing that from and after July 1st, 1883 all laws imposing taxes on tobacco snuff, cigars, cigarettes shall be repealed and all laws which impose any internal restriction on the use of leaf tobacco

The question recurring on Mr Kelley, of Pennsylvania moved to amend the amendment by changing the date from July 1st, 1883 to January 1st, 1884

Mr Chandler of Mass, opposed the amendment, which, if adopted, would take away hope of getting a reduction of the tax on sugar Mr Kelley's amendment was rejected and Messrs Kelley and Randall were appointed tellers upon Mr Randall's amendment The vote was a very close one and announced as being 99 to 99

Mr Randall claimed that the affirmative was 103 and Mr Kelley joined with him in asking for a recount A mistake through the fact that a number of members surrounded the tellers and made it impossible for their report to be heard by the Chair On a recount the amendment was lost—yeas, 100; nays 107.

Mr Robeson, of New Jersey offered the following amendment striking out the clause imposing special license tax on dealers in leaf tobacco, &c

Mr Miller, of New York offered an amendment permitting any person, firm, individual or corporation, to withdraw from bond alcohol or spirits by paying alcohol in specific quantities of not less than 500 gallons, without the payment of the tax for the sole purpose of use in chemical pursuits Without action the committee rose with the understanding that it should come up on Monday as unfinished business Mr Belmont, of New York moved to reconsider the vote by which the House refused to order the previous question on the morning hour bill to a third reading The motion was entered and will be called up on Monday or Tuesday The House then at 5 30 p m adjourned

WIND AND RAIN.

Several Persons Killed.

Many Buildings Unroofed.

NEW YORK, June 25 A hurricane struck Hoopersville, 50 miles northeast of this city at six o'clock yesterday morning, destroying the Presbyterian church, the house carpenter shop and 25 residences and barns in Hoopers and vicinity. The storm lasted only fifteen minutes A farmer was fatally injured Loss in houses in Hoopers estimated from $10 000 to $15 000 Twenty five farm houses and barns outside were destroyed A tornado came to Spencer Station, 20 miles from Sanborn, with the report that in his neighborhood six were killed and forty injured It is believed at Spencer forty buildings were blown down in Clay county

A Howling Fiend

SPENCER Iowa, June 25. A cyclone passed through this vicinity Friday night, striking this town and did much damage, unroofing buildings, tearing up sidewalks, and blowing down residences, barns and business blocks In the southern part of Clay county it blew down 20 houses and killed five people and injured about twenty five

At Emmintsburg it blew down four residences took the front out of four business blocks made a total wreck of Shanner's Hollow works and injured four persons, two mortally

THE WEATHER.

The Special Meeting of the Cabinet.

PLEA FOR A RESPITE UNANIMOUSLY REJECTED.

The Murderer Informed of the Result.

WASHINGTON, June 24 The result of the special meeting of the Cabinet last evening in considering the case of Guiteau was made known officially this morning by a statement from the Attorney General that the plea for a respite had been refused This conclusion was reached last evening, but was purposely withheld from the public in order that it might first be made known to the prisoner

The Attorney General, to whom all the appeals and petitions to the President bearing on the case had been referred, submitted an elaborate report to the Cabinet last evening, reviewing all the points presented in favor of a respite, and recommending that it be not granted on the ground that the sanity of the prisoner had been fully established at the trial The report was generally discussed and unanimously approved by the Cabinet, all the members of which were present. An understanding was reached that nothing should be disclosed as to the decision of the Cabinet until after it should be disclosed to the prisoner This was the reason why all applications to the members of the Cabinet last evening failed to elicit any definite information on that subject

Rev Mr Hicks called upon the President and the Attorney General last evening to learn the result of the meeting, but was informed that nothing could be divulged on the subject till this morning. Similar efforts on the part of Mr Reed, Guiteau's counsel, were also fruitless.

Rev Mr Hicks called upon the Attorney General this morning, by appointment, and was informed that the Cabinet had decided not to interfere with the execution of Guiteau's sentence Mr Hicks thereupon drove to the district jail and informed Guiteau of the decision.

Guiteau has sent the following message to his spiritual adviser, Rev Mr Hicks "Go and see Arthur and shake your fist in his face Tell him I made him President by my inspiration and he must give me an unconditional pardon, and if he does not God Almighty blast him forever. I tell you, Brother Hicks I am God's man and God takes care of his own F"

Letters have been received by Mr. Chas H Reed and others interested in Guiteau's case from Mr George Scoville, who is now in Chicago In these letters Mr. Scoville announces that his wife has left Cleveland for the East, and he expresses grave apprehensions as to her sanity. He fears that she contemplates attempting to kill her child and committing suicide on the day of Guiteau's execution

Mr Scoville earnestly urges her friends in the East to keep a close watch upon her movements

The Attorney General to-day issued instructions to the Marshal of the District and the warden of the jail to keep Guiteau in strict confinement until the day set for the execution, and allow no one except his spiritual adviser, his physician, and the officers of the jail to communicate with the prisoner The friends of the condemned man still profess a hope for Guiteau Mr Reed says he does not despair, and he will make another appeal to the President at the earliest opportunity.

Dr. Beard left here for New York last evening, but is expected to return.

Miss Chevaillier will have a conference with Dr Godding and Rev Mr Hicks this evening to determine upon their future action, with a view to obtaining a stay of execution

Reed Interviewed.

The Star says. Mr. Charles H. Reed, Guiteau's counsel, called at the Department of Justice this morning, but the Attorney-General referred him to the District Attorney, and declined to grant him a hearing. Mr. Reed said to a Star reporter that he felt satisfied before he retired last night that the President's decision was adverse

"What are you going to do now?

"I don't know, I don't know of any thing that can be done,' was the hopeless reply

Rev Dr W W Hicks

called at about 11 30 o'clock, remained for an hour He informed Guiteau of the result of his efforts in his behalf This announcement did not seem to have a depressing effect upon him and he talked as cheerfully as ever He expressed some feeling because the President had referred the subject of his respite to the Attorney General, saying that President Arthur should have taken the responsibility himself Dr Hicks and the prisoner engaged in religious conversation for some time Ere parting arrangements were made by which Dr Hicks would spend some hours with him daily

Preparing for the Execution

The windows in the east side of the south wing of the jail in which Guiteau's cell is located has been curtained to shut out the the light. This morning the rope which is to be used in the execution was rigged up for the occasion. It is a fine piece of manilla, originally seven eighths of an inch in size, and has been stretched until it is now of but three-fourths of an inch, and is 46 feet long. It is as soft and pliable as it can be made. After having been laid out the ends were firmly bound with twine, and the knot was tied This is probably the best made hangman's knot ever prepared in the district, being as compact as possible has been prepared by the Deputy Clerk of Court It is as follows Whereas, Charles J. Guiteau has been indicted of felony and murder by him done and committed and has been therefor arraigned and upon such arraignment has pleaded not guilty and has been lawfully convicted thereof, and whereas judgment of the Court has been given that the said Charles J Guiteau shall be hanged by the neck until he be dead, therefore you are hereby commanded that upon Friday, the 30th day of June, in the year of our Lord, 1882, between the hours of 12 o'clock meridian and two o'clock past meridian of the same day, him, the said Charles J Guiteau now being in your custody in the common jail of the District of Columbia, you convey to the place prepared for his execution within the walls of the jail of the District of Columbia and that you cause the execution to be done upon said Charles J. Guiteau in your custody, so being in all things according to the said judgment, and this you are by no means to omit, at your peril, and do you return this writ into the clerk's office of said Court so endorsed as to show how you have obeyed the same. (Witness) D. K. Carter, Chief Justice of said Court.

The Death Warrant

The warrant will be signed on Monday by Mr. Meigs, Clerk of Court, and sent to the Warden

EGYPT.

The Situation.

ALEXANDRIA, June 25. The Khedive has written Ragheb Pasha, President of the Council, recapitulating the recent events in Egypt, which the Khedive describes as deplorable. He declares a strict, searching inquiry must be held and he commands Ragheb Pasha to earnestly consider the best means of finding out the causes that led to the catastrophe in Alexandria, which he says might have been averted by timely measures. He urged Ragheb Pasha to discover the names of the promoters of the riot and their accomplices with a view to their severe punishment. The Khedive says it is absolutely necessary that measures be taken for the re-establishment of friendly relations between the natives and Europeans, for the maintenance of order and for business resumption, on which the prosperity of the country depends.

The Conference.

CONSTANTINOPLE, June 25. At the sitting of Conference to-day the sovereign right of the Sultan over Egypt were discussed, and confirmed.

ALEXANDRIA, June 25 The Sultan has conferred the order of Medjidie of the first class upon Arabi Pasha. He also presented the Khedive with a souvenir of diamonds, and conferred upon Sultan Pasha the distinction of a high rank. Ragheb Pasha telegraphed the Count De Lesseps contradicting the report that the Suez Canal is in danger.

ST. XAVIER'S ACADEMY COMMENCEMENT. The seventeenth annual anniversary exercises, occured at St. Xavier's Academy, on Saturday last at 10 o'clock The large school room was filled with parents and friends of the students. Bishop Healey, and Fathers McSweeney and O Brien, and Mayor Strickland, and W H. McCrillis, Esq., occupied seats on the platform. The exercises opened with a chorus by the children of the various under-classes. Miss Maggie Conners read a salutatory. An instrumental duet, "Joys of Spring," by Misses Julia Sullivan and Inez Hadlock An essay on the "Soothing Power of Music," was read by Miss Bella McNulty An historical drama "Sicilian Vespers" was played by Misses Jennie McPhee, Bella McNulty, Nellie Conners. Maggie Conners, Katie O'Connor, Maggie Guthrie, Julia Sullivan and Tillie Dolan. Miss Katie Sweeney read an essay on "Isabella of Castile." A vocal duet, "Voices of the Night" was sung by Misses Bella McNulty and Maggie Guthrie, and an instrumental duet "Shepherd's Evening Song," was given by Misses Julia Sullivan and Tillie Dolan, Miss Nellie Conners read an essay "Variety's the Very Spice of Life." Miss Jennie McPhee's recitation, "Joanne of Arc." A company of seven little misses rendered a recitation, "When we are Women." Miss Jennie McPhee read an essay entitled, "A Few Thoughts on Friendship." "Hear Me, Norma," a vocal duet, was rendered by Misses McNulty and Guthrie. Miss Maggie Guthrie read an essay, "Home the Heart's Resting Place." Several members on the programme were omitted on account of the length of the exercises. The above pieces were presented in a very creditable manner, and showed that the young misses had become very proficient under the able instruction imparted. Graduating gold medals and crowns were conferred on Misses Bella McNulty, Nellie Conners, Jennie McPhee, Maggie Conners, Katie Sweeney and Maggie Guthrie. A long list of prizes were awarded as academic honors to the various classes, and several special prizes were awarded for exemplary conduct, politeness, regular attendance, punctuality, neatness and order.

MEETING OF THE COUNTY GRANGE The Penobscot County Grange held its regular monthly meeting with Mystic Tie Grange, Kenduskeag, on Saturday last. This enterprising and beautiful little village never appeared to better advantage, and its citizens generally did everything in their power to make their guests happy Mystic Tie had decorated their hall in a profuse manner with choice, fragrant flowers, and a delicious dinner was served The business transacted was interspersed with excellent music and readings. Worthy Master Gregory presided and the meeting proved one of more than usual interest. Nearly three hundred members were present The next meeting is to be held in Etna, on the last Saturday in July. The ride to and from the meeting was highly enjoyed by those living at a distance The fields give evidence of a very heavy hay crop, and all other crops are coming forward rapidly and bid fair to be fully an average The air was full of the sweet fragrance of June flowers and the melodious songs of birds, reminding one that the summer months of beauty, song and flowers are upon us, and that it is time to throw care aside, occasionally, and seek the silent hills where peaceful waters glide.

DROWNING ACCIDENT

A Russian Pedlar Loses His Life While Bathing in the Penobscot

Shortly before dusk last evening word was received that a man, while bathing in the Penobscot, had met with death from drowning The scene of the affair is on the Brewer side of the river, only a short distance above the toll bridge which spans the Penobscot The individual was accompanied by a companion when he went bathing

It seems that the fellow was not a swimmer and suddenly reaching water beyond his depth, sank and did not rise. The word of alarm was given and a large crowd soon assembled on the Brewer shore The river was speedily swarming with boats and grappling for the body was soon in progress The person accompanying the unfortunate man was a foreigner and could not talk in a language which could be understood. After considerable investigation it has been decided the name of the drowned man is Jh Wolster. He was a pedlar, had lived in Maine five years, and kept store in Richmond for awhile. He was a Russian Catholic. On his clothes have been found between $132 and $133, a watch, and mileage ticket, and at his boarding house he had two trunks, three valises and several boxes. His occupation was peddling dry and fancy goods He was about 26 years old and unmarried The body had not been recovered up to a late hour

STATE COLLEGE COMMENCEMENT

The Sophomore Prize Declamation — Baccalaureate Sermon by President Fernald

The beginning of the exercises of Commencement week at the State College, the Sophomore prize declamation, took place in the Town Hall there, Saturday evening last, and, notwithstanding the mercury ranged among the nineties during the day, and the evening was hot and sultry, the hall was filled at an early hour The auditorium was beautifully decorated with the National colors, long lines of red, white and blue hanging in festoons from centre pieces to sides and corners, with numerous columns of evergreen around the railing of the galleries and reaching to the ceiling, from the middle of which hung, suspended by an evergreen cord, a ball of the same material, in massive proportions, adding much to the beauty of the decorations. Upon the platform there was a profusion of flowers of rich and delicate hues, in pyramids and bouquets, while high upon the wall, in rear of the stage, hung the class motto, "Never Despair," beautifully done in scarlet and gold, beneath which was the emblem of beauty, a la Oscar Wilde, with "'84," the class number, in the centre, the whole surmounting a wreath of evergreen. The entertainment commenced promptly at 8 o'clock and continued in accordance with the following

MUSIC

*Absent

The speaking was generally well rendered and many pieces gave evidence of considerable oratorical skill and careful training by the college faculty, all of which was highly appreciated and greatly enjoyed by the large audience present. Andrews' orchestra, of this city, furnished the music which was finely rendered.

Sabbath morning the several places of worship were well attended, many alumni, and other strangers being present. In the evening, promptly at the hour designated, President Fernald gave his Baccalaureate address in the Town Hall (the full text will be found on our first page).

The exercises opened with singing "Praise the Lord" by a choir consisting of Mr. Holden, of this city, Mrs. Hubbard, of Farmington, Miss Holt, of Orono, a graduate of the college, Mr. Leonard and Miss Heald, both of Orono, the latter at the piano. Reading of the Scriptures by Rev Mr. Eldridge, of this city; prayer by Rev. Mr. Battles, pastor of the Universalist Society, of Orono; singing "Rock of Ages;" Baccalaureate address by President Fernald, prayer by Rev. Mr. Hawes, pastor of the Congregational Society, Orono; singing "Gloria in Excelsis," and the benediction by Rev. Mr. Eldridge.

Unitarian S. S. Concert.

The Sunday school connected with the Unitarian Society held the closing concert of the season last evening. The church was very appropriately decorated for the occasion. The pulpit and platform in front were nearly covered with beautiful flowers arranged in form of pyramid and bouquets were suspended from the gas brackets, while canary birds mingled their sweet notes with the children in the exercises. Rev. Mr. Stewart read several selections between the numbers of the following programme:

Band Tournament at Lake Maranocook

The arrangements for the monster band tournament at Lake Maranocook to-morrow (Tuesday) are about completed Nearly all the bands in the State have signified their intention of being present, and the management are receiving very flattering letters of encouragement from leaders of bands who appreciate the benefit derived from these tournaments One leader says, "We wish to enter again. My sole object is to advance my band in good playing, not for the amount of money we might possibly receive. I consider that our competing last season was better for us than three months practice"

The programme will be more extensive than last year. In addition to the six cash prizes will be the prize cornet, valued at $175, to be awarded to the best cornet soloist, which makes a grand total of $600 In competing for the prizes each band will play a quickstep and a selection, and the prizes will be awarded by competent judges from outside the State. After the band contest there will be a grand concert by the consolidated bands under the direction of Mr. Frank L. Collins, giving a more extensive programme than last year Another new feature will be the music for dancing by Collins' full military band of 25 pieces. In connection with the tournament the managers have secured the services of Mr J E Jenks, who will provide a mammoth clam bake of sufficient dimensions to supply 20,000 people at an extremely low price. Special excursion trains will be run on the Maine Central and all connecting roads. On each train cars will be reserved for ladies, in which no smoking will be allowed.

THE LAW OF KINDNESS

is universal, it affects all the human family, all animals, and may be even found in patent medicines. Some are drastic, and the patient is obliged to suffer pains worse than the disease; but in cases of obstinate constipation, dyspepsia, there is no remedy so kind, so gentle in its effects, and yet so satisfactory, as Burdock Blood Bitters. Price $1 00, trial size 10 cents.

HAY FEVER.

Mr. A. L. AVERY, Pharmacist, Newark, N. J —Having been severely afflicted for eleven years with Hay Fever, after trying almost everything without avail, I gave up all hopes of being cured, when I purchased of you a box of Ely's Cream Balm To my surprise, after a few applications, I was entirely relieved. R. WATSON HARRIS, Letter Carrier No. 14, New P. O., Newark, N. J.

I HAVE BEEN a Hay Fever sufferer for three years, and have often heard Ely's Cream Balm spoken of in the highest terms, but did not take much stock in it because of the many quack medicines. A friend persuaded me to try the Balm, and with wonderful success. This recommendation you can use for the benefit of Hay Fever sufferers. T. S. GEER, Syracuse, N. Y. Price 50 cents.

The Sentinel tells the following regarding a lady in Lyman aged 98 years She was engaged to be married, to a respectable young man and was making a wedding dress Her father entering the room forbade the marriage She answered Well father then you must maintain me as long as I live She stuck her needle into her unfinished dress, arose and put it to the drawer, where it has remained until the present time 80 years By the kindness of the lady of the house we had the privilege of seeing the dress It is a white cambric the skirt was finished, except a ruffle to go around the bottom, on which she was at work when laid aside

NEW MAGAZINES

ECLECTIC MAGAZINE —The July number of the Eclectic is at hand, and, as it begins a new volume, it offers a favorable time for commencing new subscriptions The number is an excellent one It is illustrated with one of the finest steel engravings that has ever appeared in the magazine, entitled Love s Confession, and this engraving alone is worth the price of the number The table of contents is as follows A Word About America, by Matthew Arnold, Charles Lamb and his Friends, by John Dennis, Across the Yellow Sea, The Sun as a Perpetual Machine, by R A Proctor, Wagner s Nibelung and the Siegfried Tale by Karl Blind, Adrift, by May Probyn, The Lady Maud, a sea tale, by the author of The Wreck of the Grosvenor, etc, James and John Stuart Mill Traditional and Personal Memorials, by J S Stuart Glennie, The Last King of Tahiti by C F Gordon Cumming, Oding the Wanderer, a Safeguard in Tempest, by C F Gordon-Cumming, What is There Left for Me to Say? by Rachel de Fonblanque, Three Great Dictionaries, The Story of a Block of Coal, by Prof A H Green, A Day at Margate, by Margaret Lonsdale, Thackeray as a Novelist, Elk Hunting in Norway, by Clement Bunbury, Poor White Trash, Titles of Books, Good-Morrow and Farewell, Literary Notices, Foreign Literary Notes, Science and Art, and Miscellany

Published by E R Pelton, 25 Bond Street, New York. Terms $5 per year, single copy, 45 cents, Trial subscription for three months, $1

ST NICHOLAS FOR JULY, is an ideal Fourth of July number. In the first place, there is the amusing story by Sophie Swett of The Boy who Lost the Fourth of July, then an interesting account of An Early American Rebellion which was led by Nathaniel Bacon against the Governor of Virginia in 1676, and Noah Brooks contributes a spirited narrative of the famous sea fight between the Essex and the Phœbe in the war of 1812.

Besides these, there is a very entertaining article on Swords, by John Lewees, which is illustrated by twenty-three pictures of various sorts of swords, famous sword-hilts, and one of the sword-bearer of Exeter, and the fine, ceremonial weapon he carries.

The frontispiece illustration is a dash of picture of The Queen of Prussia s Ride, accompanying a poem with the same title

Edwin Lassetter Bynner s eight-page story, The Extra Train, is a clever account of a family who spent an entire summer on a specially fitted up train of cars, and Frank R Stockton, tells an amusing story of a Coon hunt.

But perhaps the article which will be read with the most wide spread interest is that on Amateur Newspapers, by Harlan H Ballard This contribution treats of the rise of amateur printing and its development into an industry, with an organized Association There is a history of the National Amateur Press Association, with specimens of, and extracts from many amateur journals portraits of distinguished amateur journalists, and hints in regard to starting and carrying on an amateur newspaper

Mrs Dodge's story, Donald and Dorothy is continued with an amusing mock boat-race and an exciting adventure on the road

The number is completed with the usual departments and a capital selection of clever stories jingles and pictures

The Letter-box contains a report of the Children's Garfield Fund!

WIDE AWAKE FOR JULY The July Wide Awake opens with an exquisite picture of child life and summer time, called The Lupins, drawn by Mrs Jessie Curtis Shepherd, and accompanying a melodious little poem of the same title, by Elizabeth Cuming Following this, comes The Assistant a brilliant story by Mrs M H Catherwood a history of some grown boys and girl but placing before the growing ones some good ideals of determination in business sisterly devotion womanly energy and broad generosity. It has excellent illustrations by H P Share Eliot McCormick of the Christian Union has a good short story Did Ethel see the Queen? and Mrs Kate Upson Clark tells merrily How Jared saw the Elephant Sequels to The Circle Club and Ours, and From the Hudson to the Neva begin in this number under the titles, The Trojan Wat and Lost among the Savages, and the third Act of the Comedy No Questions asked is very amusing A practical feature of the number is a plan for A Summer Evening s Entertainment, by G B Burgin let, with working diagrams for the construction of a portable stage. The entertainment comprises tableaux, pictures statuary and pantomimes Summer ramblers will enjoy the exquisite illustrations of Miss Harris' Wild Flower Paper, also the many beautiful poems in the number After this feast of beauty and amusement comes the Chautauqua Reading Course with its Historical papers, Geographical papers, Law papers Health and Strength papers Natural history papers and Home work papers—the most delightful part of the magazine in fact

Mr. OSCAR CRAIG Blown up by a Premature Blast in the Rosendale Cement Quarry--Destruction of an Eye--Its Subsequent Removal by Surgical Operation.

Mr Oscar Craig was foreman in a cement quarry at Rosendale, Ulster Co N Y By an explosion one day in the quarry he lost an eye—lost it totally Under the impression that the matter was less serious the doctor pinched it and told him the eye would soon be all right but could be saved by treatment The proper treatment was tried and failed Worse remained behind, for he was in danger of losing the other also from sympathetic inflammation In this strait he consulted Dr DAVID M KENNEY of Rondout N Y, who told him the eye could be saved but to save the other To this Mr Craig demurred and went back home in doubt His local physician and friends, and one of the most eminent oculists in the country having looked at the case said You have lost one eye can only hope to save the other but you can to save the other Quickly Dr Kenney removed the ruined eye and treated Mr Craig with "KENNEY'S FAVORITE REMEDY" to build up the system and the result was successful

Dr Kennedy s great success as a surgeon is due to the use of Favorite Remedy in the after treatment.

Are you troubled with Dyspepsia, Liver Complaint, Constipation or derangement of the Kidneys at all like these then use Dr KENNEDY'S FAVORITE REMEDY It will not disappoint you
